

PRICE VARIATIONS IN COTTON MARKET

Market Irregular During Week, but Trading Light and Fluctuations Narrow and Unimportant.

New York, March 19.—The market was irregular throughout the week, but trading was very light and fluctuations were narrow and unimportant. The extreme range from last Saturday's closing quotations was a decline of 12 to 15 points, followed by a recovery yesterday to 7 to 9 points over last Saturday's closing for the old crop months to 4 from the new. The improvement was well sustained up to the closing hour yesterday. Then efforts on the part of some leading bulls to liquidate disclosed very little buying power left among local operators and none from outsiders. This resulted in the general slump being quite sharp, and finally closing rather weak at just about last Saturday's closing quotations.

The lighter movement of the crop has made the statistical position of the staple appear stronger, and with the manipulation in the near months here and at Liverpool this has continued the principal feature of trading. At the same time, however, spot dealers still report a poor demand for export, and speculators for spot cotton, and most brokers continue to report almost no activity in either investment or speculative buying of contracts for outsiders.

Monday's Final Crop Report.

The position as to whether prices will be forced higher from this level, or even maintained on about the present basis, depends largely on the attitude of the bull clique, and also whether the final report of the Census Bureau on the past season's crop—which is due to be announced early Monday—will indicate a total commercial yield of less than 12,000,000 bales. The trade is expecting this report to show a prospective total commercial crop of between 11,000,000 and 12,000,000 bales, including linters. This would be a bumper crop of the previous year, and would tend to strengthen the position of the world's visible supplies at the close of last season on August 31, and would tend to strengthen the position for this year being estimated by the conservative experts on such mat-

WHEAT FIRMER, BUT FLUCTUATIONS SLOW

Light Primary Receipts, Better Crop Reports and Fair Export Demand Are Chief Influences.

New York, March 19.—The domestic wheat markets were irregular early in the week. Fluctuations were slow, largely because the trading was chiefly confined to the buying of a small character. The limited action was chiefly ascribed to the scarcity of potential buyers, and to the fact that the market was not looking as well as had been expected.

As to drought, it was alleged that in numerous instances the fields looked almost worthless, the plant having suffered mainly from the want of a soaking rain. This created the impression that farm reserves were decidedly light, as it was argued that farmers were willing to accept current bids, especially if they thought it all likely that the government's treatment of Canada would be passed. Buying was quickened partly, and notably in the Northwest, by the dry, cold weather here, which was expected to result in a smaller crop of wheat. At the same time, however, the reports from the Northwest, where buying was stimulated partly by the continued light primary receipts, and partly by the fact that the principal centers being approximately 60 per cent. less than in the corresponding time last year.

Inter Influences.

In the last half of the week wheat markets continued narrow, with unimportant variations, although the near-by influences were slightly stronger, while the distant were comparatively weak. This caused no surprise, as there was a falling off in crop damage reports, which had been expected to be frequently the case, exaggerated and hence it was the general impression that the outlook was as good as usual. The market was further strengthened by the fact that the principal centers being approximately 60 per cent. less than in the corresponding time last year.

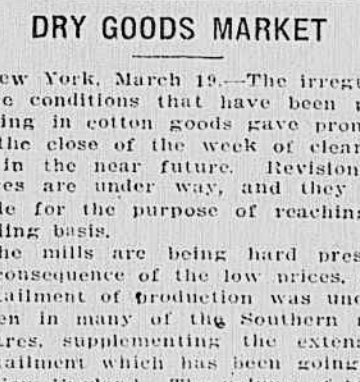

the strength in the nearby markets, and especially in Northwestern markets, was largely attributed to continued insignificant receipts, and particularly to the fact that the principal centers being approximately 60 per cent. less than in the corresponding time last year.

DRY GOODS MARKET

New York, March 19.—The irregular price conditions that have been prevailing in cotton goods have promise at the close of the week of clearing up in the near future. Revision of prices are under way, and they are made for the purpose of reaching a trading basis.

The mills are being hard pressed in consequence of the low prices, and curtailment of production was undertaken in many of the Southern mill centers, supplementing the extensive curtailment which has been going on in New England. The volume of business being done in gray goods is fair, but at prices which manufacturers say show losses varying from 1 cent to 2 cents per pound. Fall River sold 200,000 pieces of print cloth, of which 60,000 pieces were for spot delivery. This volume was about 30,000 pieces in excess of the restricted production.

SEEKS TO RECOVER HOUSE OF MYSTERY

Suit Reveals Fact that "Queen of Diamonds" Has Disposed of It.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
New York, March 18.—Foreclosure proceedings, instituted to-day by Mrs. Helen Dwell Jenkins, the famous mansion erected a few years ago by Louis V. Bell, at 39 West Eighty-sixth Street, at an estimated cost of $225,000, disclosed the startling fact that this "House of Mystery" was conveyed late Friday by Mrs. Jenkins to "Anna Levy, of Portland, Ore." Detectives and attorneys, with the orders, began search at once to obtain personal service of an amended foreclosure notice.

Since the debut of the beautiful Southern woman, Helen Dwell, in New York City in 1906, at which time she came into prominence through a suit against Adolph Davis, of Prospect, N. Y., to recover an $11,000 diamond necklace, she has been well-known in certain circles where pleasures reign and jewels glitter.

Just about one year ago she purchased the mansion from Mrs. Harned, making a cash payment of $50,000 and assuming a mortgage for a large amount. The foreclosure proceedings were started because of her failure to pay an installment of $10,000 upon the purchase price, the day of grace for which expired Friday at midnight. There are also due certain interest payments.

Mrs. Dwell Jenkins has been known as "The Queen of Diamonds," a title bestowed upon her while she was residing at Memphis, where her entertainments of the younger set at "Cozy Cottage," her own house, attracted a large notice.

The name of John H. Collins, a prominent Southern banker, was linked with that of Mrs. Dwell Jenkins during her days as a lavish entertainer in the Southern city. Later, in New York City, she continued this hospitality to groups of young Southern society members, who seemed to find great delight at her little parties.

Rare Condition Found When Roanoke Youth Is Examined With X-Ray.
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Roanoke, Va., March 19.—A rare case of heart displacement came to light here Friday. It was through the interest taken in a seventeen-year-old boy by his aunt, Mrs. Osceola Vanhorn of 506 D Street, Southwest, Washington, D. C., that an examination of the young man was made and an X-ray photograph taken, which determined beyond all doubt that his heart is on the right side of his body, instead of on the left.
